

Abstract of the Invention

The present invention describes a suite of methods, protocols, and software systems that allow for the creation of distributed spreadsheets. Distributed spreadsheets are spreadsheets that contain cell references to external data, in particular data that is located somewhere on the internet. This enables users to incorporate external data into their spreadsheets without having to go back and update them when the external data changes.